As part of the Title & Total Compensation Project, employees are matched to jobs in the online Standard Job Description Library.

The matched job title and standard job description should capture the essential function of the employee’s position and reflect how they spend the majority of their time.

To confirm the title and standard job description that your employee has been matched with, consider the following questions:

- Does the title and standard job description reflect the essential role and responsibilities of the position?
- If you were to summarize the position in one or two sentences, would your summary look similar to the standard job description summary?
- Does the employee spend most of their time performing these responsibilities?
- If you saw this description as a job posting somewhere, would you equate the posting to your employee's job?
- Does the employee perform all of the responsibilities?

If you do not answer “yes” to all the checklist questions:

1. Explore other jobs in the Standard Job Description Library. Review jobs in the same job family or sub-family for descriptions that may better match your employee. You can also use the search feature to look for key words to find a better match.

2. Reach out to your institution Human Resources unit. Describe the key responsibilities that are missing from the standard job description and suggest alternative options. Your institution Human Resources unit will help you find the best fit.

Remember that the standard job description presents an overall picture of the work and is used to describe the job across the entire university system. It will not include every task your employee performs but should reflect the core functions of the position.
As a manager, you have a key role in the implementation of new titles and standard job descriptions for employees across the University of Wisconsin System. Employees have the opportunity to review and discuss their new titles and standard job descriptions with their managers before these changes go into effect.

To help ensure you and your employee have a positive and productive conversation, here are some ways you can prepare.

GET INFORMED
- Familiarize yourself with the project’s purpose and benefits
- Familiarize yourself with what will change, and what will stay the same

CONFIRM TITLE AND STANDARD JOB DESCRIPTION
- Confirm the employee’s title and standard job description
- Be prepared to explain why this title and job description captures the position. If you disagree with the assigned title, connect with your institution Human Resources unit to discuss concerns. Together, you will either identify a better title, or better understand the rationale for the assigned title.
- Review related titles and standard job descriptions
  - If the employee’s new job title has a level, review the other levels of the job
  - Review related jobs in the same sub-family
  - Review other jobs that the employee might identify with

PREPARE FOR QUESTIONS
- Jot down questions you anticipate from the employee
- Find the answers to the anticipated questions—review Frequently Asked Questions, review learning resources on the project website, reach out to your institution Human Resources unit

SET EXPECTATIONS
Help your employee prepare for the conversation by letting them know how to prepare. Here are some ways you can set expectations at least 72 hours before the conversation:

- Share information about the Title and Total Compensation Project
- Let your employee know what will be discussed
- Let your employee know what will not be discussed
- Invite employees to bring their questions
- Let employees know that you may not have all the answers, but you will share what you know, and communicate as you get more information.
DURING THE CONVERSATION

To help my employee understand the project, have I:

- [ ] Shared the purpose of the project?
  You can share the project’s purpose and benefits by sharing the TTC Overview.

- [ ] Given opportunities for the employee to ask questions about their new title and job description?

- [ ] Asked whether the title and job description accurately describe the position?

- [ ] Described business title guidelines and agreed on a business title?

- [ ] Asked if the employee wants to suggest any changes?

- [ ] Listened to the employee’s questions and concerns?

To help employee understand what will happen next, have I:

- [ ] Shared that an official notification of new title will be sent to employees?

- [ ] Described the appeals process?

- [ ] Invited employees to share any follow up questions and concerns with me after the meeting?
Managers and supervisors who will meet with employees to discuss new titles and job descriptions can use the following email templates for employee-manager conversations.

To Schedule Employee Conversation

Purpose:
- Explain purpose of employee-manager conversation
- Schedule meeting time
- Provide resources to inform employees about the Title and Total Compensation Project

Subject: Conversation about Your Updated Title and Job Description

Hi [EMPLOYEE NAME],

The Title and Total Compensation (TTC) Project is a major UW System initiative to update official job titles and job descriptions. The project aims to match UW job titles, compensation, and benefits offerings to the labor market in order to attract, reward and retain employees. I want to assure you that your job is not changing as part of this project.

I’ll schedule a time for us to meet [OR: I’ve scheduled a time for us to meet on DATE, TIME, LOCATION] to review and discuss your new proposed title and job description together. I will send you the job description before we meet. Please read through it and bring your questions to the meeting.

In the meantime, the Resources page (wisconsin.edu/ohrwd/title-and-total-compensation-study/resources/) on the project website has helpful materials to learn about the project and its potential impact. Here are some links that I hope you find useful.

2. [DOWNLOAD AND INSERT What to Expect During Employee-Manager Conversations]

Hi [EMPLOYEE NAME],

I want to make sure you have an opportunity to prepare for our conversation about your updated title and job description before we meet on [INSERT DATE OF MEETING].

I’ve worked with our Human Resources unit to identify your proposed best fit official job title and job description. I’ve attached the job description for your review. You’ll notice that this job description describes the work you currently do in a different way using core job responsibilities. I want to assure you that your job is not changing. This new job description format is to help the UW describe employee jobs in a more concise and consistent way.

As you look through the job description, please ask yourself the following questions:
• Does the title and job description reflect the essential role and responsibilities of my position?
• If I were to summarize my position in one or two sentences, would my summary match the job summary?
• Do I spend most of my time performing these types of responsibilities?

When we meet, I would like to get your input on the job description before we finalize it. Please bring any questions you have. I’ve attached a handout with more details on what we’ll discuss in our meeting.

The Resources page (wisc.edu/ohrwd/title-and-total-compensation-study/resources/) on the project website has many useful materials and may answer some questions you already have.

Here are some of them:
